Report of the Guest Lecture on Prospects of studying Law at Georgetown University

On October 12, 2017, Mr. Justin Swinsick, Director of Graduate Admissions, at Georgetown University Law Centre, delivered a guest lecture to the students of Campus Law Centre, about prospects of studying law at Georgetown University. With proactive approach of Professor (Dr.) Usha Tandon, Professor-in-Charge, Campus Law Centre and her special interest in free flow of ideas in legal academia, this event was very successful.

Professor (Dr.) Usha Tandon felicitating Mr. Justin Swinsick

Mr. Swinsick apprised students about all law degrees offered by Georgetown University, to non-U.S. student, such as: J.D., LL.M. and S.J.D. etc.; and procedure to get admission in these courses. He explained in detail online admission system through LSAC; where and what kind of entrance test are required in U.S.A. to pursue legal degrees. Mr. Swinsick informed that in certain degrees admission for students of Campus Law Centre is possible even without any entrance test. After lecture, in interactive session, students asked various questions ranging from LL.M. admission to the prospects of practice and professing law in U.S. Mr. Swinsick was delighted to have a good discussion with well-informed students and faculty members of Campus Law Centre.
