MOOT PROPOSITION

The Republic of Bhartim, inspired by India's long-standing constitutional and legal traditions, undertook structural reforms in 2023 to modernize its legal system and respond to technological and societal challenges of the twenty-first century. To this end, the Parliament enacted the Bharatim Nyaya Sanhita, 2023 (BNS 2023), which replaced the colonial-era penal code. Alongside these reforms, Bhartim also passed the Data Privacy and Data Protection Act, 2023 (DPDPA 2023), a comprehensive statute recognizing digital privacy as a fundamental aspect of dignity and autonomy under Article 21 of the Bhartim Constitution. This legislation mandated informed consent for data collection, introduced strict obligations on data fiduciaries to implement transparency and security safeguards, and imposed duties to communicate any data breach to data principals. Both enactments sought to protect individual and collective rights, especially in light of rapid digital advances.

In the state of Pashchim Pradesh, the capital city Vishalya had by 2025 emerged as a leading hub for artificial intelligence innovation. It was in this context that AryaAI Systems Pvt. Ltd., a local technology startup, launched its artificial intelligence platform "JnanaBot" on 1 February 2025. JnanaBot was marketed as an advanced system capable of mining and analyzing indigenous Indian knowledge spanning Ayurveda, Vedic sciences, traditional arts, and community-held cultural practices. AryaAI claimed that the platform's purpose was to generate innovative medical remedies, new technological outputs, and commercially viable patents with global reach. According to AryaAI, JnanaBot's breakthroughs would bring Bhartim both intellectual property advantages and international recognition, while simultaneously preserving traditional wisdom through digitization.

Shortly after the launch, on 10 March 2025, the Bhartim Indigenous Knowledge Council (BIKC), representing a federation of indigenous communities and cultural custodians, lodged a formal objection to the Ministry of Law and IT. BIKC alleged that JnanaBot relied extensively on sacred texts, hereditary practices, and community-held knowledge systems without obtaining prior or informed consent. It objected that the commercialization of these collective resources without any form of benefit-sharing arrangements amounted not only to exploitation but to a violation of dignity and cultural autonomy. In late March 2025, several investigative journalists revealed that JnanaBot's advisory outputs actively promoted expensive pharmaceutical products largely associated with foreign patent holders while undervaluing simple and more affordable traditional remedies available within local communities. Independent researchers connected this bias to skewed training data sets and algorithmic influences introduced through foreign commercial collaborators. On 5 April 2025, further disclosures emerged that AryaAI had failed to maintain proper protections for cultural and personal data stored within the JnanaBot system. It was revealed that sensitive archives, including metadata linked to knowledge custodians, were left unsecured, creating the possibility of cultural identity exposure. Despite these risks, AryaAI had not issued any breach notifications as required by the DPDPA 2023.

In light of these revelations, the Ministry of Law and IT, Government of Bhartim, initiated prosecution against AryaAI Systems Pvt. Ltd. before the District Court of Vishalya on 2 May 2025. The company was charged under the BNS 2023 for misuse of protected community knowledge, harm caused by negligent AI practices, and acts done with culpable negligence affecting public interest. Simultaneously, violations of the DPDPA 2023 were also alleged, including unauthorized processing of personal and community data, failure to obtain informed consent, inadequate safeguarding of data, and deliberate non-reporting of breaches. The Government contended that AryaAI's actions amounted to statutory violations and simultaneously breached the fundamental rights of equality under Article 14 and privacy under Article 21 of the Constitution of Bhartim, as indigenous communities were deprived of recognition and subjected to data exploitation.

AryaAI, in its defence, argued that no criminal intention could be imputed as JnanaBot functioned autonomously without human control or conscious direction. The company maintained that the use of digitized data, once placed in the public domain, was not expressly prohibited by law for artificial intelligence training. It further asserted that the products generated by JnanaBot were protected under Bhartim's intellectual property laws and that questioning these rights would stifle innovation. With respect to data bias, AryaAI contended that any partiality was merely an unintended outcome of technological limitations and not deliberate negligence. Finally, the company affirmed that it had exercised sufficient compliance with DPDPA 2023 requirements and that any suggestions to the contrary exaggerated minor shortcomings.

On 20 August 2025, the District Court of Vishalya delivered its judgment. The Court concluded that AryaAI's use of indigenous knowledge without express community consent was unlawful under BNS 2023. It held that mens rea, as recognized under the statute, extended to culpable negligence and recklessness in the field of artificial intelligence governance and therefore could be attributed to AryaAI's failures in supervision. The Court found the company non-compliant with DPDPA 2023, observing procedural lapses in the absence of informed consent, the lack of adequate safeguard implementation, and the failure to notify knowledge custodians of breaches. In terms of larger constitutional consequence, the Court ruled that the operation of JnanaBot had undermined both the equality of communities, as guaranteed under Article 14, and their privacy, as secured by Article 21. As remedies, the Court directed a complete cessation of the commercial use of JnanaBot until compliance with consent and data protection norms was established, ordered AryaAI to execute community benefit-sharing agreements, required the adoption of technological corrections to address algorithmic bias, and directed the payment of interim damages to the Bhartim Indigenous Knowledge Council.

Discontented with the ruling, Arya AI filed an appeal before the High Court of Pashchim Pradesh on 15 September 2025. The grounds of challenge included the alleged error of extending the concept of mens rea to cover artificial intelligence outputs generated autonomously without human direction, the misinterpretation of indigenous knowledge protections as restrictions on patent rights granted by intellectual property laws, the flawed finding of DPDPA non-compliance, and the erroneous conclusion that constitutional rights under Articles 14 and 21 had been infringed. AryaAI also questioned the proportionality of the District Court's orders directing cessation of commercial activities and immediate payment of interim damages. The High Court of Pashchim Pradesh, after hearing arguments, substantially confirmed the findings of the District Court while upholding the core remedial directions though with minor modifications. AryaAI, dissatisfied with this outcome, sought further recourse by filing an appeal before the Supreme Court of Bhartim.

Upon admission of appeal, the Supreme Court of Bhartim framed the following issues for adjudication:

1. Whether the unauthorized use of community-held indigenous knowledge by AryaAI without prior community consent constitutes a violation of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, 2023.
2. Whether the Jurisprudence of mens rea may be extended to include culpable negligence or recklessness in cases involving outputs of autonomous AI systems.
3. Whether AryaAI complied with the statutory obligations under the Data Privacy and Data Protection Act, 2023, specifically in regard to informed consent, data security, breach notification, and protection of the rights of data principals.
4. Whether the biased outputs of JnanaBot amount to an infringement of the constitutional rights to privacy and equality, guaranteed to indigenous communities under Articles 14 and 21.
5. Whether the District Court's remedial orders—including suspension of commercial use, execution of benefit-sharing agreements, corrective measures to eliminate AI bias, and award of damages—were proportionate, lawful, and justified.
